HOT SPRING, N. C.

DEAR SIGNAL:--How I've looked, longed and waited for last week's issue. We should all bear in mind that punctuality begets confidence and this is repaid by confidence. These two words contain lessons on morals sufficiently comprehensive to fill volumes if properly written.

We are still here, and here stiller than we would like to be, for I would like to be taking in "Lovers Leap" and other objects of interest in the smokies, but I am yet unable to walk and a buggy costs $2 "per diem--per day," or even for a shorter time.

While the residents are very kind to visitors and especially to the sick and the afflicted, yet they all know what money is and how to make long charges. Yes, I am unable to perambulate, medicine I've been taking and the water that I have so freely imbibed for nearly two weeks and two little sick spells, have reduced me in flesh, strength and good looks and I have none of either to spare. We see that the Rockcastle Teacher's Institute will convene Monday next and while I can't be with them in person, yet in heart, soul and thought I will make one of your number. I like institute work for both the instruction and amusement it affords. Speaking of the institute runs me back to the 70's when the work was begun by our efficient Supt. J. C. P. Myers, and carried successfully through by him and such teachers as Profs. Storrs and Patten, Jesse Reynolds my first and a beloved teacher; these have crossed the River, R. H. Swiney, Dr. and E. M. Denney of Missouri, S. D. Sowder of I. T., W. C. Bruce, and Ben and John and their sisters to parts unknown, R. S. and S. H. Martin, W. A. B. and Dr. S. C. Davis, Jas. (Jimmy) Roberts, myself and brother, J. W. Brown, are yet here but not teaching.

The Dr. called in today, made inquiry and examination and said that I am doing well--as well as he expects or desired. So mote it be! This water is wonderful on the stomach. One may drink half a gallon and even more, often during the day and experience no trouble, but it reduces your flesh and strength.

It has rained nearly every day or night since we came, and it is now so hot that I am sweating at every pore, and I expect more rain at once.

Tom secured an invalid chair and rolled me through the town, about one-fourth of a mile from our room, to the Hot Spring and bath room. I went with the full intention of bathing and then sweating, but I found two sets of marble steps to descend before reaching the pool and I knew that was impossible for me, even with help, at present, so I contented myself with drinking lots of water, sweating profusely, resting on a cot, and then a short distance to their famous spring where I drank plenty of water the only free thing here except the air and noise. We saw, besides the hotels, many other good substantial buildings and I got a more extended view of the Smokies which are picturesque, sublime, yea, awe inspiring in their appearance and especially to one whose experience with mountains has been limited to the hills of Rockcastle, and Concess Knob near Crab Orchard. These are big things. Some of them have a romantic history attached, like Lovers' Leap, a perpendicular peak hundreds of feet high on which the young Indian and his lover climbed to the top and then jumped into eternity together, because the chief of the tribe would not permit them to marry. The 10-cen man here has a newspaper published January 1800, over 105 years ago. I'll give you some extracts in my next. This is an old town and seems to be finished, republican in politics, though quiet. The French broad is a turbulent little river with lots of fish though not many caught.

Ashville, 30 miles up the river, the noted summer resort for tourists, pleasure and health seekers, is filled to the overflowing by men, women and children from the world over, so I am informed. I read, write, eat, sleep, talk, think and pray. I hope all good people will send up short petitions for me often. Very truly,
BUCK VARNON.

Why Called Man?

[By J. S. Reppert.]

An idea or argument is prevailing among the illiterate class that we never could have known that we are men unless some supernatural agency had taught us and named us man. We presume this idea has been foisted on a credulous people by some religious journal; as any argument, however, it is unworthy of notice.

Hearing this idea oft repeated, it produced a very interesting train of thought in my mind. When and why called man? What else and why has he been called other names?

Our language, our customs, our civilization, all that makes us great have been developed out of and from three sources. The Greek, the Latin, and the Teutonic peoples. By referring to the language of these races we can get a definite idea of why and how they named the human biped we call man.

The Greek name was Anthropos (An-a-up; Thepo to turn; ops the face). Thus what we call man, the Greeks called Anthropos because he was the only animal developed that moved with upturned face.

The Latin name for man was Vir, which was derived from the Latin word vis, meaning strength. Hence man was named Vir by the Latins on account of his strength. The German or Teutonic race apply the word Mancher, and the Anglo Saxon the term man. Both these words are derived from the Latin word manus (the hand). Hence the word man is clearly of human origin and was applied because his hand was better developed than any other in animal life.

What a world of thought we have here for the intelligent and thinking man. Not only is the term man most clearly the evolution of human reason and human thought; but the terms anthropos, vir, mancher, and man show by their composition and derivation that human language must have had considerable development before these names were invented.

Sims, at this place. On account of so much wet weather the bees lost out in their honey business during the month of June. Mr. George Shockley, of Berea, sold Wm. Clonise 13 acres unimproved land for $50. The public school begins here next Monday. Mr. Pleas B. Broadus and wife, C. Shropshire and wife, Mrs. Betty Chenault, Geo. Hume, Jno. D. Simmons and D. M. Chenault, all of Madison county, spent last week here enjoying the good water from the big well.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child not expected to live from one hour to another, but cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey, of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle, she was well." This remedy is sold by all druggists.
